Investigation of historic emeralds from the museum collection of the Ecole des Mines de Paris

Eloïse Gaillou
(Mines Paris PSL, F)

A reproduction of the crown of Napoleon III, displayed at the Abeler collection of crowns and regalia in Wuppertal, Germany. While the gold of the crown was melted away and gems sold (like most of the French Crown Jewels), the 50 smaller emeralds were attributed to the collection of Paris School of Mines in 1887. | Photo modified from Wikimedia Commons by Kevin Schumacher, GIA.
