Research Interests and Experience:

Research interests in the fields of mineral and materials science. Good working knowledge in diffraction (including synchrotron X-ray and neutron sources) and various spectroscopic (IR, Raman, Mössbauer, and NMR) methodologies, as well as in thermodynamic and calorimetric investigations. Good working experience with experiments at high P and T conditions. Recent research is focusing on the crystal chemistry, thermodynamic and physical properties of silicate solid solutions (garnet, olivine, cordierite), molecular-level interactions between microporous minerals and molecules and fast solid-state Li-ion conductors.

Experimental Techniques:

- 1) Calorimetric (DSC, Low-temperature relaxation calorimetry, high-temperature solution calorimetry) and thermal analysis (TGA/DTA) measurements.
- 2) X-ray powder and single-crystal diffraction measurements (including synchrotron radiation).
- 3) Various spectroscopic techniques including - UV/VIS, FTIR, Raman, NMR, ⁵⁷Fe Mossbauer.
- 4) Nondestructive chemical analysis with the SEM, electron microprobe and optical microscopy.
- 5) High-pressure and high-temperature instrumentation - diamond anvil cell, solid-media pressure devices, hydrothermal experimentation.

Academic and Scientific Honors:

- B.S. with Distinction in the Honors Program - University of Michigan (1978)
